

Appendix

This is a story about an old fisherman who has successfully caught the biggest fish in his life. The story is begun with a description of an old man named Santiago. He has gone fishing 84 days without any fish. Some people in the village called him as an unlucky fisherman. On the other hand, Manolin who faithfully always helps the old man is asked by his parents to leave Santiago. However, Manolin is still faithful to Santiago. He keeps going to Santiago's flat and helps him. Manolin has been a good companion for Santiago. In the next day, Santiago tells the boy that he will catch the fish.

In the 85th day, Santiago brings his little skiff far to the sea. In the afternoon, Santiago hooks a very big fish. Santiago struggles to pull the line but he can not manage to pull. He can not do much besides being towed by the giant fish. Santiago really struggles to hold the line which links him to the fish. He feels hurt and exhausted but he needs to catch this to prove that he is now lucky.

In the third day, the fish seems to be exhausted that this is the chance for Santiago to kill it. With the last power, Santiago hit the fish with a harpoon. Finally, the fish is dead and Santiago bonds the fish and starts to go back to the village. The bad things happened when the sharks are tempted by the blood of the giant fish. Santiago tries to protect his Marlin by attacking the sharks. He uses everything in his skiff as a weapon to kill the sharks. Straving and exhausting, Santiago tries to beat all the sharks with a harpoon, a club, and finally he has nothing except a knife. However, his effort is useless because there are too many sharks eating the giant fish.

Finally, the sharks go away because there is no more to eat. Santiago feels hurt but he just continues his way home.

Santiago brings the skeleton fish to the village. Santiago goes to his flat and sleeps. Manolin cries when he sees Santiago sleeping with his hands bleeding. Then Manolin goes to find drinks and food for Santiago to eat. On the other hand, people in the village are extremely amazed by what they see. In the shore people gather to see a very big skeleton fish. They say that this is the biggest fish ever.