Dear Mrs. Rahayu:

It is a pleasure to accept your commentary entitled "Establishing music therapy as an alternative to reducing compassion fatigue among health workers" for publication in Prehospital and Disaster Medicine.

The commentary will now be placed into the Production process to prepare for publication. When typesetting is complete, you will receive electronic proof copies of the commentary for review and final approval.

Also, please upload a scan of a signed Author Publishing Agreement (designated as Author Publishing Agreement) using the following website and instructions:

<https://www.cambridge.org/core/journals/prehospital-and-disaster-medicine/information/author-publishing-agreement>

Please note that ScholarOne treats uploading of an Author Publishing Agreement as a revision. YOUR PAPER WILL NOT BE PLACED IN QUEUE FOR PRODUCTION UNTIL THE SIGNED FORM IS UPLOADED AS A REVISION. PLEASE DO NOT ATTACH THE FORM TO YOUR RESPONSE TO THIS DECISION LETTER. Once we receive final files and Author Publishing Agreement, your manuscript will be placed into Production. Due to the number of accepted manuscripts, this process can take 2-3 months to begin AFTER receiving a signed Author Publishing Agreement.

From time to time, WADeM/PDM and Cambridge University Press undertake marketing efforts to highlight papers published in PDM. If you would like your manuscript to be considered for this type of publicity, please fill out the publicity survey at:

<https://www.surveymonkey.com/r/pdm-social-media-articles>

Thank you for your contribution to Prehospital and Disaster Medicine.

With best regards,
Samuel Stratton

Dear Dwi Rahayu,

Prehospital and Disaster Medicine (pdm): Establishing music therapy as an alternative to reducing compassion fatigue among health workers

We're pleased to confirm that we have received your article for production, and this email sets out what happens next. Your contact at Cambridge University Press throughout the production of your article will be Lucie Hudson, and the unique reference for your article is S1049023X2300599X.

What you need to do:

As Corresponding Author, you will receive a proof of your typeset article and will be responsible for returning any corrections, on behalf of any co-authors.

If you have not already done so, you need to complete and return an Author Publishing Agreement, which you can find here. Follow the instructions included at the top of the form and ensure that all pages of the agreement are returned as soon as possible.

If you have any colour printing or page charges to pay, you will receive an email from Rightslink, no-reply@email.copyright.com. This email is sent on behalf of Cambridge University Press and will include instructions on paying your charges.

Please look out for emails from us or our suppliers. While your article is in production you will receive important emails from cambridge.org or the typesetters and other suppliers working to prepare your article. Please check your junk mail folder regularly over the coming weeks. We will work with you with care and respect, and in turn ask that you work with us in the same spirit. Please review our Dignity at Work policy for more detail.

Important note: once your article has been published, corrections to the content cannot be made. Any errors in author names, the article title or key metadata found later will be corrected via a correction notice.

Please get in touch if you have any queries, or visit our production FAQs. We look forward to working with you.

Best wishes,

Lucie Hudson
