Dear Ms. Gin Gin,

Thank you very much for your email; we have been looking forward to it.

I apologize if I have missed an earlier email from you (since I have experienced a few glitches with my institutional email account recently), but honestly this is the first email that I have received from any representative of IJAL editorial team ever since we submitted our article. As such, this is the first time that we have seen the draft with the comments from the reviewer.

We are grateful for the comments from the reviewer and we will work on the revision as soon as possible. If it is acceptable to you, we hope to be able to submit the revised draft in two weeks time. Kindly let us know if this time frame is workable. Thank you once again for your understanding.

Dear authors

I'd like to inform you that your paper is now being reviewed for publication at IJAL. For our confirmation, please let me know whether you have revised the paper based on previous suggestions from our reviewers. Here I attached two versions of your articles, the first one is with the comments from our team and the second one is your original paper with no revisions.

Please confirm to us at your earliest convenience so we can proceed to the next step.

Best wishes,

Dear Ms. Gin Gin,

Thank you once again for the time given to us to revise the paper. We have since worked on the revision and made several changes based on the suggestions of the reviewer.

We herewith attach the revised version of the manuscript. Instead of showing the changes we made as marked-up (tracked), we have tabulated all the comments of the reviewer and the changes made correspondingly in an excel file, which we also append herewith. We think that it is a better solution since a marked-up version might look messy and harder to read. We hope that this can facilitate the next round of review.

Thank you and we are looking forward to hearing from you soon.

Dear Ms. Gin Gin,

Hope this email finds you well.

We are just wondering if there is any further update to our revised submission dated last January 28. We would greatly appreciate it if you could kindly respond to this email so that we know that you have received our previous email on the revised manuscript.

Thank you very much in advance
