challenges to provide strength and love;

7. My friends of 2021 Academic Year, who have supported and fought together throughout this process;
8. Mis Amigos 21, friends I have never expected to have, for adding color to my academic journey, always being there to support and embrace one another so I never felt alone even though I was far from my parents. I am deeply grateful to have met and had friends like you who accept all my flaws, are willing to listen and share stories together, and have been willing to become brothers and sisters without blood ties;
9. To all my friends and kind-hearted people whom I cannot mention one by one specifically, for being there and accompanying me through this process;
10. To myself for being willing to fight and never giving up.

ABSTRACT

This study aims to examine questioning as a strategy used by teachers in improving students' speaking skills, especially in the context of English language learning. The research method used is library research by analyzing 15 relevant articles and previous research. The main focus of this research is to describe how questioning as a strategy can improve students' speaking fluency, the types of questions that teachers frequently use, and the challenges faced in its implementation.

The research design involved qualitative content analysis of selected literature to systematically categorize findings related to the use of questioning as a strategy in improving speaking skills.

The results showed that questioning as a strategy, especially the use of referential questions, was most frequently in increasing students' active participation and speaking fluency. Teachers who employed a variety of question types also encouraged students to think critically and develop ideas orally. However, the research also found some challenges, such as students' lack of confidence, time constraints, and teachers' inexperience in designing effective questions.

This study concludes that questioning as a strategy is an important tool in learning to speak. Training for teachers as well as the support of a conducive learning environment are needed so that this strategy can be implemented optimally in improving students' speaking skills. This study recommends that teachers be more active in creating their questioning techniques and receive continuous professional development to overcome the challenges and maximize the benefits of questioning as a strategies in teaching speaking.
